

English for Nurses

Effective communication in English is an increasingly important skill for nurses around the world. This course focuses on the key English skills nurses need to communicate with patients and colleagues in a variety of nursing contexts. The emphasis is on developing clear spoken communication, with some attention also being given to written English.

Who is this course for?

This course is intended for practising nurses with a minimum level of A2 (pre-intermediate) English. Participants should already be able to ask and answer basic questions about familiar topics related to their work and life and be able to say and write complete and accurate sentences on these subjects.

What are the benefits?

- Increasing your confidence in using English for nursing
- Improving your ability to communicate effectively with patients and colleagues
- Improving the clarity and accuracy of your English

Afternoon tour and lecture programme*

Following several years' successful partnership with local healthcare institutions, we are pleased to offer this course with an inclusive full afternoon activity programme of visits to local, national and private healthcare institutions, including talks from senior healthcare staff and tours of each establishment. These include:

- a presentation about the NHS
- a presentation and tour of a hospice
- a tour of a general hospital
- a lecture by a practicing nurse
- a tour of a county hospital
- a visit to a private hospital
